(U//FOUO) Posters, the color of money, will be popping up around the complex shortly. The reason? - to announce Global Economic Security Day on 2 April 2004.

(U//FOUO) This will be the second in a series of outreach and networking events put on by the SIGINT Directorate Customer Gateway and the first national economics forum of its kind to bring together policy makers and intelligence managers and analysts from across the U.S. Economics and Intelligence Communities. Its purpose: to exchange ideas and promote interagency understanding and enhanced networking across the Economics Community and the intelligence ranks and to ultimately strengthen economic security here and around the globe.

(U//FOUO) "Partnering to Achieve U.S. and Global Economic Security: The Role of Intelligence" is the theme of next month's event and it is open to all blue badge employees who work economics-related issues. There will be a morning plenary session with individual presentations and a high-level customer forum. The afternoon offers a broad menu of breakout sessions on a variety of topics and targets.

(U//FOUO) Interested? Registration is on a first-come first-served basis. A networking luncheon is available. You can find additional information including a detailed agenda with registration instructions by visiting the Global Economic Security Day or "go econ". Pay us a visit there and sign up!
